Chapter 1

In a great city named London lived a sister and a brother, Olivia and Oliver. They lived not far from Paddington metro station.

Their house was special. It wasn't big, but it was cozy. They lived in one room together. There was a big bunk bed, a wardrobe, and a bookcase. There were a lot of books about space in the bookcase because the children were interested in learning about the Solar System.

Oliver always dreamed of becoming an astronaut. Olivia was fond of exploring new things, but she was afraid of setting off.

They weren't only siblings; they were twins. Both of them had the same cheerful smile that showed their two little front teeth, a little button nose with a few freckles, and a little pink mouth that often whispered secrets to each other. But their eyes were different: Oliver's were bright blue like a summer sky, and Olivia's were deep green like the leaves in the park after the rain. The twins were nine years old, their birthdays celebrated with a big cake and lots of balloons.

Oliver and Olivia loved each other very much. But like many other children, they sometimes argued. However, ten minutes after a quarrel, after thinking about the situation, they made peace.

Chapter 2

Once Oliver and Olivia were watching a TV program about the Sahara Desert. Suddenly, they saw an advert about the Solar System Museum. They were amused by it and asked their mum to let them go there. Mum called the museum and booked tickets for them.

So, the next morning, they woke up early and went to the museum. It was even better than in the advert. There were very big models of planets, pieces of meteorites, and even an alien spaceship!
