

Bunny Rabbit stood by the door, not quite sure what to do. His Mommy had a cold, and he wanted to buy her some honey. Everyone knows that the best medicine for a cold is tea with honey. Although Bunny Rabbit was still small, he knew that he was not allowed to go far from home. You could get lost, his Mommy told him.

But Mommy had a sore throat and he really wanted to help her. Everyone knows how much little bunnies love their mommies! So he bravely crossed the street and ended up alone in the big city.

"Could you please tell me where I can buy some honey?" Bunny Rabbit asked a passerby.

"Hon-e-e-e-e-e-y?" purred a voice. "Go straight, then turn right at the flower shop. You'll see a fountain, and behind it, a park. When you get to the park, ask again."

"Thank you!" said the bunny and continued on his way, quietly repeating to himself, "Straight, right, fountain, park..."

He walked and walked until he came to the park. A man was selling ice cream.

Bunny Rabbit asked him, "Excuse me, where can I buy honey?"

"Over there, on the other side of the street," said the man. "Cross at the crosswalk and you'll see the place."
